Dynamite Trio to Open 2008 Season

by Tim Coakley

A Place for Jazz always tries to open its season with a bang, and this year will be no exception. The Bill Charlap Trio will present our first concert at 8 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 12 at the First Unitarian Society of Schenectady.

Pianist Bill Charlap comes from a musical family. His father, Moose Charlap, was a Broadway composer and songwriter whose credits included the scores to Peter Pan, The Conquering Hero, Whoop-up, Alice Through the Looking Glass and Kelly. His mother, Sandy Stewart, is a popular song singer who performed with Benny Goodman, co-starred on TV’s Perry Como Show and scored a Grammy nomination for her hit single, “My Coloring Book.

After stints with saxophonists Gerry Mulligan and Phil Woods, Bill Charlap formed a trio that has been delighting audiences for ten—plus years. His crisp, inventive playing has made him a favorite among jazz audiences, and the rapport he establishes with bassist Peter Washington and drummer Kenny Washington is just phenomenal.

Peter Washington was born in Los Angeles in 1964. He began playing classical bass in his Junior High School orchestra, and played a season with the Westchester Community Symphony at age 14.

In 1986, he joined Art Blakey’s Jazz Messengers and moved to New York City. He performed with the Messengers through September of 1988, and then started a career as a freelance musician.

Since coming onto the New York jazz scene with Lee Konitz’s Nonet in the late seventies, Kenny Washington has been a favorite of veteran beboppers like Betty Carter, Johnny Griffin and Milt Jackson, who appreciate his unerring sense of time and ability to drive bands of various sizes. He is one of the most frequently recorded drummers of the last twenty-five years.

The trio has recorded numerous CDs, including ones devoted to the music of Hoagy Carmichael, George Gershwin and Leonard Bernstein. Working their way through the Great American Songbook, as well as some of the classic jazz compositions, the trio is sure to get our 2008 series off to a great start.

This publication is made possible with public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts, a state agency.

Esperanza Spalding demonstrated this pleasurable difference in a variety of ways on Sunday August 3. One of these was the interesting ways she artfully and naturally embodied some of the “old” (the time-honored traditions of instrumental Jazz and the Great American Songbook) as well as some of the “new” (her own unique talent and affinity for both free & contemporary jazz, Brazilian & other Latin music, and superior Pop). Her fluidly natural ease in singing in English, Spanish and Portuguese was clearly a huge asset.

Another difference with the concert was her choosing a number of classic songs that in addition to not being on either of her two CD’s, distinguished themselves from earlier unforgettable versions by legendary artists, with her very personal interpretation.

The first of these was her set opener, a spirited reading of bassist Norman Mapp’s composition “Jazz Ain’t Nothing But Soul”, indelibly etched in this reviewer’s mind from the outstanding 1960 release, “The Modern Sound of Betty Carter”. Esperanza’s swinging version was at a slightly slower medium tempo. Two other selections not on her CD’s that she did exceptional versions of were two exquisitely haunting songs - “Wild is the Wind” (memorably recorded by both Johnny Mathis and Nina Simone) and as a delightfully sensitive closing encore, accompanying herself solo on bass, “The Midnight Sun”, which some associate primarily with Ella Fitzgerald, from her 40th Birthday concert LP in Rome in 1958.

The concert did include however three songs from her latest CD, “Esperanza”, each with very different styles. The classic “Body & Soul” was done in 5/4 time, with some very different phrasing. Her own composition, “Precious” was closer to contemporary (but not exactly “Smooth”) Jazz. And “Ponta de Areia” was a lilting Brazilian tune by Milton Nascimento.

Her touring band of three very capable, young Boston-based musicians, Leo Genovese on piano, Richard Vogt on guitar and Otis Brown III on drums were very adept at handling the intricate rhythms which are a huge part of her appeal. Her own bass work, with great ease in playing imaginatively stimulating lines, was outstanding, as one would expect from someone who’s played with artists like Joe Lovano and Pat Metheny, among others.

At only 23, her voice should continue to develop and deepen; but her basic vocal attributes - range, intonation, breath control, etc - are already beyond that of the average instrumentalist who also happens to sing. And most find her ability to sing and play rhythmically intricate lines simultaneously truly exceptional. However, while her phrasing & delivery in singing lyrics was both imaginative and pleasing, her vocal quality that some of us found most compelling and extraordinary was her wordless vocalizing/scatting.

It’ll be interesting to see which way she and her management decide to take her career, in terms of the degree to become more or less commercial, versus more artistically abstract and Jazz & World music oriented. She alluded to this dilemma in introducing “Precious” that she wrote for her second CD, trying to get a “Pop hit”. The song apparently wound up being too complex for mass appeal, but was certainly enjoyed by the jazz audience at the Music Haven. A possible hint at the direction she may be leaning toward, now that she’s recording on a major label (Concord), is the absence on the new CD of most of the wordless vocalizing/scatting that dominated the first CD, “Junjo”, in place of more lyric-driven songs.

But regardless of which career direction she chooses, the depth and scope of her talents, in conjunction with the very attractive, joyful, confidently expressive persona she exudes will surely take her far. A number in the audience were heard to comment on her “star quality”.

But above all else, this observer was most struck by how her unique total package makes her impossible to easily compare to any other performer. She’s truly an original.

This is the second in a series by Jan Egry about her friend, the famed Johnny Morris.

When Johnny Morris and I graduated from Crane School of Music in 1958, I went on to teach music. Johnny didn’t. Though classically trained, his talent as a jazz pianist was such that he immediately immersed himself in the professional world of music in New York City.

My friend Johnny has not retired. He currently divides his time between two venues in Connecticut/New York and in Palm Springs, California. Several of his piano arrangements have appeared in Piano Today.

I asked him to recall some of the more memorable moments during his years of association with people whose names are on the tip of every jazz aficionado’s tongue. He recounted to me the following anecdote, which I’ve transcribed in his own words:

With Buddy Rich in Rio de Janeiro:

Another funny story was in Rio de Janeiro. There was an energetic piano player who was really thrilled to have Buddy Rich’s band in town, and he was going to make the most of it. He wanted to meet Buddy. He wanted Buddy to hear him play. I’m sure he would have been very happy to take my job. (He would have been number three).

He befriended me and actually he became a pest because he kept calling me at nine o’clock in the morning and say, “C’mon, I want to show you Rio. I want you to meet some friends. I want to take you to hear a session and hear some of my other musicians.”

He was really energetic and very motivated. I admired his energy. So, I finally went to the club where he was doing a solo (gig). He wanted me to get Buddy Rich to come to the club, so I asked Buddy, but Buddy said no. I don’t think Buddy was all that interested, but I went to hear the guy play, and he didn’t play very well. To be perfectly honest, he was trying to play jazz and he was not making it. But he played a couple of Latin things that sounded pretty good.

He was picking my brains constantly. “What do you think I should do?” “How can I meet Buddy Rich?”

I said, “Well, you know, that’s pretty difficult. I’ll tell Buddy I came to hear you.”

He said, “No, I wanna get a group together. I want to have singers and I want to have a whole bunch of rhythm instruments.”

I said, “You know, that’s really hard, because it’s a hard to sell a bunch of musicians – when you have five or six musicians. Why don’t you get a bass player? Work out something and get a job at a nice little club. Maybe somewhere along you’ll be able to do a trio, but, gee, with all those singers and instruments, and so on --.”

And then he said, “What do you think of the jazz samba?” This was 1960. They hadn’t even named it the bossa nova, yet. Every club we went into, they were doing the “One Note Samba”, which is kind of a nice song, but I mean it’s really the verse to “Night and Day”. If you listened to “Night and Day”, it’s the same thing. And you know, he was so enthusiastic, he insisted, “What do you think?”

I said, “Gee, I love rhythms, I love style, I love the relaxed feeling. But I think if you’re judging it by this song that everybody’s playing, the melody’s too repetitious. It’s got to go somewhere. It can’t just be like “Johnny One-Note”.

I saw his face drop. But you know, because of all this wonderful advice I gave him, when I left, he gave me a notebook and said, “Anytime you want to come…” He wanted me to go to Ipanema – he wanted to show me Ipanema – he wanted me to stay there and visit him for a couple of weeks. But I was anxious to get home.

So I had forgotten all about the guy and about ten years later I was in a record store and I saw this face jump out at me on the front of a record jacket, and it said, “Sergio! Sergio Mendez!”

Johnny Morris is just one of many professional jazz musicians that have career experiences to relate. There are hundreds of stories out there, just waiting to be told.

Jazz Twice on Sunday

By Beverly Elander

Is it the “Devil’s Music” on the Sabbath—or making a joyful noise unto the Lord?” Regardless of your take on the phenomenon, there seems to be an increase in the last year or so with great jazz offerings on Sunday. Here are just a few in no special order:

♦ Lee Shaw continues to solo at Justin’s brunch, 11:30-2:30 the third Sunday of each month. If you are fortunate enough to sit near the small stage, Lee will ask you for requests, and play them in her inimitable style. Justin’s is located on Lark Street in Albany.
♦ Jazz Vespers is a relatively new offering, 5-6pm every other Sunday in the beautiful sanctuary of the First Reformed Church in the Historic Stockade neighborhood of Schenectady, corner of North Church and Union Streets. Organized by drummer Tom D’Andrea, the series gained enough popularity to increase from once to twice a month. Musicians featured recently were Peg and Bill Delaney (bass), Mike Cononico (trumpet), and Nat Phipps (keyboard). For more information, go to http://www.1streformed.com/
♦ The Riverstone Jazz Brunch, held at Riverstone Manor in Scotia and lovingly organized by Anita Haugen, takes place 3-4 times a year at the lovely Riverstone Manor, featuring fine food and a great location on the Mohawk River.
♦ Swingtime Jazz Society sessions alternate four Sunday afternoons a year between the Historic Stockade Inn, corner of Union Street and North Church Street in Schenectady, and Appleton’s on Central Avenue in Colonie. The incredible Jazz Voices (Jody Shayne, Colleen Pratt, Theresa Broadwell, Peg Delaney) have packed the house more than once.
♦ Siena College, under the leadership of C Robie Booth, offers "Jazz at the Sarazen" in the Maloney Great Room, Student Union several times a year.

And the winner is: This year's APFJ scholarship recipient is Sam Detweiler of Broadalbin, who begins his college career in the music department at Schenectady County Community College this fall. He plays tenor saxophone and has been home schooled. He has studied jazz with pianist Dan Dobek.

Empire Jazz Orchestra: Speaking of SCCC, the great Empire Jazz Orchestra will present its fall concert on Tuesday, Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. Titled Swing, Swing, Swing: the Evolution of an American Art Form, the concert will trace the development of swing from the Jelly Roll Morton era through the Swing Era, bebop and cool to contemporary writers like Maria Schneider. The concert will feature music of Morton, Fletcher Henderson, Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw, Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis, Charles Mingus, Maria Schneider and Gordin Goodwin, among others. Vocalist Colleen Pratt will sing “Minnie the Moocher,” Come Fly with Me” and “Beyond the Sea” in the original arrangements of Cab Calloway, Frank Sinatra and Bobby Darin.

As if that weren't enough, Music Director Bill Meckley says that saxophonist David Fathead Newman enjoyed his recent appearance with the EJO so much that he wants to make a recording with the band. Plans to do so are in the works.

Saxes for Swingtime: The Swingtime Jazz Society will present its next concert on Sunday, Oct. 26, at the Stockade Inn, 1 North Church St., Schenectady featuring the Adirondack Saxophone Quartet. From 4 to 6 p.m., this outstanding group of area saxophonists will present a program of arrangements by Lennie Niehaus and others. Further information and reservations are available at 346-3400.

Lee Shaw Trio CD Release Party: The Lee Shaw Trio will release a CD/DVD of their recent European Tour. Release Date is Wednesday, October 15 at a Trio Concert at the new $2,000,000 Massry Center for the Arts on campus at the College Of Saint Rose, where Lee has been adjunct faculty since '83.

Chill out and dance: The Albany Chill organization will present a weekend of music and dance on the weekend of Sept. 5-6-7. On Friday, Sept. 5, there will be a dance featuring the great vocalist Ernestine Anderson at The Albany Elks Lodge, 25 South Allen St, Albany Dance lesson: 7:30 p.m., dance: 8:30 p.m.-midnight. $20 for Dance Flurry members, students and seniors. General admission $25.

On Saturday, Sept. 5, the great Count Basie trombonist Benny Powell will be joined by vocalist Catherine Russell for another dance. Same time and place. $20 for Dance Flurry members, students and seniors. General admission $25.

Then, on Sunday afternoon, Skip Parsons' Riverboat Jazz Band will play for listening and dancing from 1 p.m.-6 p.m. on Peebles Island, 1 Delaware Ave. Cohoes. $12 for Dance Flurry members, students and seniors. General admission $15.

The price for the full weekend of events is $80 for Dance Flurry members, students and seniors. Weekend general admission $85. Contact: http://www.albanychill.com
