Enjoy Summer, then swing into Fall

by Tim Coakley

There will be plenty of jazz to enjoy this summer, and inside this newsletter you will find information on a number of jazz concerts and festivals scheduled in the Capital Region for June, July and August.

Once September rolls around, we will be getting ready for our fall season of jazz, to be held in the acoustically superb Great Hall of the First Unitarian Society of Schenectady.

First up, on September 12, will be the great Bill Charlap Trio, with Peter Washington on bass and Kenny Washington on drums. Bill Charlap is one of the most highly regarded interpreters of classic jazz instrumentals and Great American Standards. This trio has made numerous acclaimed recordings, and their well-honed interplay will make for a wonderful opening concert. Get your tickets early!

On September 24, local tenor saxophonist Lee Russo and drummer Joe Barna will lead a quartet in our second concert. They are two of the most in-demand young musicians in the Capital Region, with an exciting post-bop style. Compositions from their recent well-received CD "The Abenaki" will surely be among those played.

Bassist Ben Allison has been called an adventurous improviser and a visionary composer by Jazz Times. His 2004 CD "Buzz" was number one on national radio charts for 6 weeks. On October 10, his quintet, which he calls Man Size Safe, will give us a chance to sample his unique approach. As for what the name of the group means, you'll have to attend the concert to find out!

Vibraphonist Joe Locke and his quartet will perform on October 24. His dazzling technique and inventiveness have enthralled audiences for more than two decades, and he consistently places high in readers' and critics' polls. He has more than 25 CDs as a leader to his credit, and his group will bring a unique sound to concert series.

Finally, on November 7, Concord recording artist Karrin Allyson will conclude our season with an evening of superb singing. Two of her CDs, "Ballads" and "Footprints," have been Grammy nominees. Her wide-ranging repertoire includes standards, bebop, and Brazilian and French classics. Her recent CD "Imagina: Songs of Brasil" has received critical acclaim.

Tales from the Trenches
(Anecdotes from the Jazz World of Johnny Morris)

by Jan Egry

When Johnny Morris and I graduated from Crane School of Music in 1958, I went on to teach music. Johnny didn’t. Though classically trained, his talent as a jazz pianist was such that he immediately immersed himself in the professional world of music in New York City.

Through the years between then and now, he has performed with jazz greats such as Zoot Sims, Jimmy McPartland, Thad Jones, Mel Lewis, Joe Newman and Clark Terry. His club appearances have included the Rainbow Room, the Waldorf Hotel, the Plaza, the Carlyle and Sheraton Hotel, Michael’s Pub and Condon’s.

Johnny was house pianist at Jimmy Ryan’s, in NYC for seven years, appearing with trumpeter Roy Eldridge, and later with Spanky Davis. He spent two years in the sixties touring and recording with Buddy Rich, and also worked with Kai Winding at the NY Playboy Club.

My friend Johnny has not retired. He currently divides his time between two venues in Connecticut/New York and in Palm Springs, California. Several of his piano arrangements have appeared in Piano Today.

I asked him to recall some of the more memorable moments during his years of association with people whose names are on the tip of every jazz aficionado’s tongue. He recounted to me the following anecdotes, which I’ve transcribed in his own words:

At Jimmy Ryan’s

Well, at Jimmy Ryan’s, we had some very surly waiters there. Because Jimmy Ryan’s didn’t have a food minimum, just had little snacks. But they did have a drink minimum, so if anybody sat down to listen to the music and had a drink (they had little, dinky bottles of beer), the waiters would be standing over them, filling their glasses and looking at them to order something else. The waiters were just mainly concerned with selling drinks, period.

There was one particular waiter, Gene, who was really interested in just making money and didn’t have much interest in what was going on. One night, some people came in to say hello to Roy (Eldridge), and they wanted to sit together. So they gathered a bunch of small cocktail tables, which were maybe 18 inches around, and pulled them over to one corner where they could all sit in one group. Gene, the waiter, came up to me and was really ticked off and annoyed that these people took his tables away from his station because he wasn’t going to make any money. I guess the waiters make a commission on what they sold.

Those people with Roy were: Tommy Flanagan, pianist; Bobby Durham, drummer; Keter Betts, bass (these were Ella Fitzgerald’s rhythm section). Ella Fitzgerald was there. Connie Kay, who was with the Modern Jazz Quartet and was working down the street at Condon’s was there and he immediately went over to the group. Benny Carter and Oscar Peterson were there. They were all sitting together at that group of little cocktail tables. It was like a surrealist dream, you know, and this fella is saying, “Who are those people with Roy, and who do they think they are?”

So, I said, “Gene, please don’t say anything. Those are some very famous people. I really feel I’m in a dream, here.”

That was a wonderful night, because Oscar remembered initially hearing me play when I was with Buddy Rich. He gave me a big hug and was very friendly, and then he sat in and I stood next to him and watched him, which was a thrill.

With Roy Eldridge in New Orleans:

I went to a jazz fair one afternoon and I heard this young boy play. I was very impressed with his playing, so I told his father to bring him to the club. We were playing at a place called The Club at the Hyatt Regency in New Orleans, next to the Super Dome. I wanted Roy to hear this little boy play. He was fifteen.

So, when I told Roy that I heard this kid play and had invited him, Roy went ballistic, ad said, “Who do you think you are? It’s not your band. It’s my band. I’m not gonna have any kids on my bandstand! You have some nerve telling him he can come and play before asking me. Call his father and tell him not to bring him!”

And I said, “Roy, I can’t. I don’t have his phone number. I told the man to bring him.” So we went through this and I practically begged him. I said, “Look, Roy, let him play one song. It’s going to be embarrassing. I invited this man and his boy. I thought you’d be really interested to hear him. He’s a talented kid. Please, let him play something.”

“Oh, all right. I’ll let him play one song.” So this father and son come in and the little boy gets his flugelhorn case out and I see him looking up at Roy and he’s nervous as Hell. His hands are shaking. Finally, he gets the flugelhorn out and starts playing with us. I notice Roy’s not too ticked off anymore and then he tells the kid to play another. So the kid played another song with us. By then, Roy was almost cracking half a smile and he said, “Play another”. He let the kid play three songs. And it’s so funny, because once we were back at Jimmy Ryan’s, Roy would always say, “You know, your boy is doing pretty well.”

At first I said, “My boy? What are you talking about?”

You know. That kid. That kid you brought in that night in New Orleans.”

“Oh?”

“Yeah. He’s in New York. He’s making a lot of noise here. He’s been working and recording with everybody.”

That boy was Wynton Marsalis.

April was Jazz Appreciation Month, and to celebrate, the musicians unions of Albany and Schenectady put on a series of events for the public that brought together the best players in the Capital Region. It gave everyone a chance to hear the many and diverse talents that we have in our area, as well as providing the musicians themselves a welcome chance to get together, which they don’t always have when they are out doing their own separate gigs.

On Sunday, April 20, the Schenectady Musical Union held an afternoon of music at the Muddy Cup, a pleasant space just off the arcade in Proctors Theatre. Three groups performed, starting with Mellotone, a swinging group featuring Ron Paruch, Lew Petteys, Rennie Crain and Tom D’Andrea. Colleen Pratt was on hand to deliver some excellent vocals.

The group Mulligan Stew followed, led by saxophonist Paul Couch (who had to burn rubber to get from his earlier gig with Peg Delaney at the Crooked Lake House).

The group evokes the sound of the Gerry Mulligan Quartet, and Paul Couch and trumpeter Paul Supple did an excellent job of capturing the spirit and feeling of that famous combo. Bill Delaney, bass, and Mark Anthony, drums, laid down a solid, sympathetic beat.

The day was capped off by alto saxist Keith Pray doing a tribute to Cannonball Adderley. He was joined by the fiery Tony Speranza on trumpet and the dazzling Dave Salazzo on piano. Bassist Lou Smaldone and drummer Joe Barna kept the pot boiling. A beautiful contrast to the boppish group came when Keith played a soulful “I Cover the Waterfront,” which was on Cannonball’s “With Strings” album.

The following Sunday, April 27, the Albany Musicians Union presented an equally fine afternoon of music at the Best Western Albany Airport Inn on Wolf Road.

The day began with a combo led by drummer Joe Sorrentino and featuring Nat Phipps, piano; Pete Toigo, bass; and Mo Rancourt on trumpet. They got things off to a swinging start, and Mo later joined Pete and guitarist Ron Bill to provide some classic jazz tunes between the sets of the other groups.

Pianist Peg Delaney led an all-star group that played several of her arrangements. The group had Mike Canonico on trumpet; Leo Russo and Paul Couch on saxes; Bill Delaney on bass and Bob Halek on drums. They swung hard and well for the entire set, and gave Horace Silver’s “Cape Verdean Blues” a real ride.

Linda Brown’s Jazz Project wrapped up the afternoon segment of the event, and featured some excellent trombone work by Jim King and nifty flute by Jim Deforge.

The Joey Thomas Big Band, just back from a Midwest engagement, played a tribute to Frank Sinatra in the early evening, with Bob Father handling the vocals and between-tunes banter. The band then turned to some Woody Herman charts, including his haunting theme, “Blue Flame,” that brought the dancers out on the floor.

During all this, guitarist Sam Farkas led a sparkling little trio in the bar lounge, with Mike Lamkin getting a roaring organ sound from his keyboard and Cliff Brucker providing some crisp drum work.

Remembering Bill Fuller

by Tim Coakley

Longtime bassist Bill Fuller passed away in May at age 89. I had the pleasure of playing with him behind such jazz giants at Doc Cheatham, Vic Dickenson and Buddy Tate. We always had a good time playing together, and, as musicians used to say, he had a good beat.

Here are some comments and memories from others in the musical community:

As President of Local 14, it was an honor to present an award to Bill Fuller during our Jazz Month Celebration two years ago for his more than 60 year career as jazz vocalist and bassist. Bill's response was characteristically humble. At a luncheon during the winter we chatted about our mutual joy of family - particularly grandchildren. Bill's devotion to his family and his gentlemanly qualities will be long remembered.

--Neil Brown

I did get to work with Bill just one time when I was playing drums. Bill was a sweet person. It was always a joy for me when I saw Bill. He was in the top class of people and will always be remembered.

--Sonny Daye

Very sad news. I'm really going to miss him.

--Paul Mastriani

Bill was special to us. We knew him ever since we started dating. (a loooong time ago.) He was a genuinely warm and sincere gentleman. Always with a smile and a hug. We would chat for a while when ever we saw each other. He would always ask us how our gigs were going and have an encouraging word. We will miss him. I only got to play with him once when I sat in at a club in Saratoga, I think it was called The Metro maybe? A beautiful soul. Springtime Blessings.

When Stan and I moved here in ’71, Bill was one of the first people we met. I don’t remember where, but I’m sure we did a few gigs together. He was always so positive and upbeat. It was important to him to challenge himself with those long bicycle rides. Sometimes, in the middle of one of those rides, he would include a visit with us, which was always fun. He loved music and the Ink Spots period, I know, really was a tremendous pleasure. A very special, very good human being.

--Lee Shaw

To me, the greatest tribute to Bill Fuller is the success of his children, all nice people like their father and fine musicians.

--Ned Spain

I’m sorry to hear about Bill. I just saw him at the jazz show in Albany and he was his usual charming self. I worked with him and Phil Foote back in the 80’s and he seemed to always be lucky with ladies. I always enjoyed working with him and will miss him as a friend and a tasty bass player.

--Mark Anthony
